THE BUTTE HORROR.

But One Man Escapes From the Burning Mine.

The following dispatch appeared in last night's Chronicle:

Butte, Mont., April 22.—The scene of yesterday's misfortune was shaft No. 2 of the Silver Bow mine, belonging to the Butte and Boston Company, and of the 10 men employed in the workings there was only one escaped. The nine are Richard Andrews, Richard Trembath, Samuel Rovetta, Edward Pascoe, Frank Gerard, James Natto, Antonio Aeara, Thomas Gray and Evan Peugh. The one who escaped is John Kramer, pumpman at the 500 station, who waded through fire to reach the cage and was considerably burned about the head and hands thereby.

The origin of the fire is not exactly known, but is supposed to have resulted from one of several lamps used for lighting the pump station at the 500 level. Whether the lamp exploded or the blaze got too high and thus communicated with the timbers is also a question that will never be solved, as no one was present at the time. Shortly before the blaze occurred pumpman Kramer ascended to the surface, and during his absence it started. On his return to the station it was a cloud of flame and smoke, which seemed to be spreading with the rapidity of a prairie fire. He, of course attempted to battle it, but his efforts were futile and he jumped on the cage and signaled for the engineer to hoist him to the surface.

The other men in the workings were unconscious of the fate that awaited them and perished as soon as the gas and smoke reached them. They were at work in various parts of the mine.

The two shafts of the property are connected by a crosscut, which extends from the 300 of No. 2 to the 400 of No. 1, the difference in them lying in the face—that is, the mouth of No. 1 is 100 feet higher than that of No. 2, which is located between the Hill nearly 1500 feet southeast of No. 1.

When the fire broke out the draft from No. 2 to No. 1 was quite strong and the smoke and gas, at least a large portion of it, was carried through the crosscut to shaft No. 1, through which it escaped in great volumes and filled the hoisting works.

As soon as the terrible calamity became known, a crowd of curious and anxious people assembled to see if relatives or friends were among the lost. Volunteers were numerous, and continuous attempts were made to reach the unfortunates.

Sonke and gas rendered their effort futile until early this morning, when five bodies were recovered, being those of Richard Andrews, Edward Pascoe, Evan Peugh, A. Beara and James Natto. These were scattered throughout various parts of the 500-foot level. All had been asphyxiated with smoke and gas. The remaining four men are supposed to be at the bottom of 200 feet of water with which the mine is now flooded.

The fire was gotten under control soon after midnight. Of the unfortunates, some were unmarried and some were men of families. Pascoe is said to have a wife in Australia, and Trembath has wife and several children in Butte. Gerard, though unmarried, has a mother and several sisters in this city, and yesterday was his first day in the mine.

Stockholders' Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Red Oak Mining Company will be held at the office of the Company in M. Cohn's store, Carson street, Carson City, Nev., on Monday, May 1st, 1893, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., of said day.

A Missing Man.

Woodland, Cal., 21.—The people of Ramsey and vicinity, Yolo county, are considerably agitated over a mysterious affair that may develop into a tragedy. Some days ago a man's blankets, coat, miner's hat and lantern were found on the grade about a mile and a half above Ramsey. The place where the things were found is on a precipitous bluff, with a creek running some hundred feet below. As the story, a day or so before the discovery was made a man appeared in Ramsey and said he had left his partner in a drunken state back on the grade.

There is more than one theory regarding the matter. The man, who had evidently been an employe of the quicksilver mines, might, while in a drunken state, have walked off the grade or he might have deliberately committed suicide. Others think that having just quit the mines, he might have had considerable money and was foully dealt with.

The Coming Contest.

On the 4th. prox. at the Opera House, Soldier Walker and Sacramento Turner, heavyweights, will contest for a purse of $500.

Walker will weigh about 180 pounds. He is a clever and game fighter, and the man who nearly killed the Terrible Swede in San Francisco last year. He is the hero of many hard battles, and once fought a 26 round contest with the man whom he is to meet on the 4th. Walker proving the winner.

Turner is a colored man and will weigh about 200. He is a man of splendid physique, a hard hitter and a stay. The men have been aching to get at each other for some time, and a splendid contest is in store.

Admission to all parts of the house one dollar. Reserved seats on sale at the City Drug Store without extra charge.
